

Baked Pineapple Teriyaki Chicken

Ready in under an hour, baked pineapple teriyaki chicken is a quick dinner recipe for busy nights. The thick and delicious homemade teriyaki sauce adds tons of fresh, bold flavor—and you control the ingredients, sodium, and spice. Serve with rice or quinoa and vegetables for a wholesome meal.

I originally published this recipe in 2015 and have since added new photos, helpful success tips, and a couple small tweaks to ensure a thicker teriyaki sauce.

If you've ever made my honey garlic shrimp, you know that dinners can be quick, healthy, and flavorful. Today's baked pineapple teriyaki chicken is bursting with flavor and makes excellent leftovers. I encourage you to add this easy meal to your weeknight recipe rotation!

Why You'll Love This Pineapple Teriyaki Chicken Recipe

- Simple to prepare
- Completely from scratch, so you control the ingredients
- Healthy and wholesome

- Ready in under an hour
- Makes great leftovers (and freezes well, too)
- Customizable to your taste preferences
- Packed with protein

One reader, Lisa, commented:

"... You really scored a touchdown with this one. The chicken and the pineapple absorb all of the flavor from the teriyaki sauce beautifully. I had to sop up all the remaining sauce because I didn't want any of it to go to waste. Definitely a recipe to do again and again!!!!

One reader, Frida, commented:

"...I made it last night and instantaneously became a staple in my house. I'll substitute soy sauce with tamari next time to make it gluten free, and use chicken drumsticks which are a personal preference. This sauce is out of this world!!!

Favorite Homemade Teriyaki Sauce

This is my very favorite

homemade teriyaki sauce made with real ingredients you can pronounce. It is similar to the sauce in this honey teriyaki chicken (we use more honey in that recipe). It's incredibly versatile and delicious on cooked salmon or stir-fry veggies,
too.

We'll use brown sugar and honey to sweeten the sauce. Not much of either, just enough to balance the soy sauce and bring a sweet profile to the sauce as a whole. It's the perfect balance of sweet and salty,
and you know exactly what's in it.

If you enjoy trying
sauces, try the garlic pan sauce
from this [creamy

(Unbelievable!)

Ingredients You Need:

- Chicken: I
use
boneless, skinless
chicken breasts.

You can use
boneless,
skinless
chicken
thighs instead, or even bone-
in chicken
thighs,
drumsticks,
or wings.

- Pineapple:
Fresh,
canned, or frozen—use whatever form of pineapple
you'd like!

- Cornstarch:
This is what thickens the sauce; I do not recommend skipping it.
Dissolve it in a little water first

before adding it to the pot.

- Brown
Sugar & Honey: For
sweetness.

- Soy Sauce:
You can use reduced-sodium or regular soy sauce here.
You could also use tamari instead, for a gluten-
free option.

- Apple
Cider Vinegar:
This
balances the flavors in the sauce. You can use rice
wine vinegar instead if needed.

- Garlic: You need 1
clove, minced, for flavor. If you love garlic,
feel free to add more!

- Ginger:
You can use dried ground

ginger or minced/grated fresh ginger,
whatever you prefer/have on hand. I usually use fresh. Just make sure to adjust the amount accordingly.
1/2 teaspoon
ginger = 2
Tablespoons
fresh
minced
ginger.

- Pepper:
Freshly
ground
black pepper, like
the ginger, adds just the right amount of spice, without making the sauce spicy.

Overview: How to Make Baked Teriyaki Chicken

Make the sauce. Cook the sauce ingredients together on the stovetop. Let it boil for a couple minutes to thicken the sauce. The consistency should be slightly thicker than maple syrup, or thick enough to coat the back of a spoon. I slightly increased the amount of time it boils in the recipe, to ensure a thicker sauce.

Pour the sauce over the chicken. Pat the chicken dry, and arrange it and the pineapple in a greased baking dish. Pour all of the teriyaki sauce on top.

Bake. Bake until the chicken is completely cooked through. During this time, prepare any sides you want to serve alongside. Rice and broccoli are my favorite pairings.

Right before it's finished baking, I remove the pan from the oven and cut the chicken into smaller pieces. This is completely optional. Here's the dish before cutting the pieces of chicken:

Serve. Garnish with a sprinkle of scallions/green onions and sesame seeds, if desired. These are the same garnishes I always add to another similarly flavored dish:

slow cooker honey teriyaki chicken. (That one is always a hit!)

Are you looking for a traditional Japanese-style teriyaki sauce? I've made and loved Nami's homemade teriyaki sauce.

Can I skip the pineapple?

Yes, absolutely. If you want regular baked chicken teriyaki, skip the pineapple altogether. You could even replace it with 1 cup sliced red bell pepper (about 1 pepper).

Can I make this with fish instead?

You can, and I recommend salmon. The bake time will be slightly shorter, until the fish is completely cooked through.

Do I bake this covered or uncovered?

I recommend baking this teriyaki chicken uncovered.

Description

Ready in under an hour, baked

1. Use a fork to whisk the cornstarch and water together in a small bowl. It will be a thick, milky liquid. Combine the cornstarch mixture, brown sugar, honey, soy sauce, vinegar, garlic, ginger, and pepper in a small saucepan over low heat. Whisking occasionally, bring to a boil. Once boiling, stop whisking and allow to boil for 2 minutes, or until the sauce coats the back of a spoon and is the consistency of maple syrup. Turn off the heat and set aside for at least 10 minutes, allowing it to cool and thicken. 2. Meanwhile, preheat oven to 400°F (204°C). Lightly grease a 2–3-quart baking dish, such as a 10-inch baking pan, 11×7-inch baking pan, shallow 9×13-inch pan, or 10-inch cast iron skillet. In the photos, I used this	exact pan. Set aside. 3. Pat the chicken dry with paper towels. Arrange in the prepared pan. Add the pineapples on top and all around the chicken. Pour sauce on top, then turn the chicken over to make sure every inch is coated in the sauce. Use a basting/ pastry brush if needed. 4. Bake uncovered for 30–32 minutes or until the chicken is completely cooked through (internal temperature should be at least 165°F (74°C)). This is optional: at	the 25-minute mark, remove from the oven and carefully slice the chicken into chunks, then return to the oven. The smaller the chicken pieces, the more sauce they'll soak up. You can also cut up the chicken prior to cooking. 5.
